BACK TO SCHOOL HACKS FOR YOUR HOME

These great tips will streamline your school year

September is upon us and by now most school-age children have returned to the halls of learning. While it can sometimes be a relief to parents compared to the dog days of summer, the new school year routine presents its own challenges. Here are a few helpful home hacks to move you to the head of the class:

Invest in Organization

The right system will greatly reduce clutter and stress. Treat yourself to some storage shelves that will allow you to organize all the school stuff as it comes in the door. Create labelled spaces for each child, organized into sportswear, backpacks, books, etc.

Spot the Difference

This new laundry system will help you avoid the last-minute stress when a needed item of clothing is buried or lost. Have different baskets in your laundry room to keep your clothes more organized. One idea is to separate them by urgency or use, such as a basket for items needed within the next few days, one for school, work, linens, etc. This will speed the process when you have just a few minutes to throw on a load and make sure that uniform or gym-strip is ready when needed.

Pre-emptive Snacks

Set aside space in your pantry and/or refrigerator for assembly-line lunches and after-school snacks. Your kids will know where to find what they need and having it organized in Tupperware ahead of time can help ensure that they are easily getting healthier alternatives instead the sugary, fatty options.

Homework Helps

Create a homework caddy to streamline the process for your hardworking kids. A rolling cart or even a large plastic crate can be used to hold the pencils, pens, erasers, coloured pencils, glue, paper, etc. This will cut down on procrastination when the time comes to get to work.
